- Early protection: Vaccinating on time provides immunity before babies and children are exposed to serious illnesses.
- Keeping safe: Ensure your child is up to date with all immunisations before starting nursery or school. Don't wait for an outbreak as vaccines take time to work.
- Vaccinating your child with MMRV protects others: Unvaccinated children can spread measles to expectant women and young babies, who are most at risk of serious complications.

Dear L.C.

As I read and reread your poignant letter in last week's News Update I can only cry with you and express my deep מיטגעפיל for all the צער and dreadful עגמת נפש you went through! I remember my beloved Mother in law, Rebetzin Schlesinger, taking in one girl after the other for two full years as a free lodger, just because someone from Eretz Yisroel had given recommendation on their ehrlichkeit. It is not so long ago. Lest we forget that we are einiklach of Avrohom Ovinu! Yes we agree to get his zechusim and the protection which comes with it! But what about emulating him? I can only ask humbly mechilo for all the צער you had and hope this will never never happen again!

Dear L.C.

I was moved to read your letter in last week's News Update. School rejections are particularly painful as they have a huge impact on the day to day life of the child and by their very nature many people are aware of it, which increases the embarrassment. It appears however that, despite the difficult challenge, you faced this with immense dignity to become the person you are today. Unfortunately, many people endure painful rejections, some of them public and people will find, as you inevitably have, that they have grown from the experience and in doing so have inspired others.

We say the blessing in birchas hashachar of hameichin mitzadei gever because it is Hashem alone who guides our path, sometimes to destinations we would hardly anticipate. When we are fortunate we are blessed to see the ultimate positive outcome.

I wish you all my blessings for personal fulfilment and nachas from your dear family.

Dear Readers

We recently lost an expensive wedding ring. Despite searching everywhere for a full week, we simply couldn't find it.

Then we heard about a special segulah mentioned in a local paper to light a candle לע"נ דבורה יוטא הינדא בת ר' משה with a promise to publicize her name.

We decided to try it, and unbelievably, the ring suddenly appeared in one of the simplest places - somewhere we had searched over and over again. We simply couldn't believe it!

We are sharing this story to fulfil our promise and publicize her name. לזכות דבורה יוטא הינדא בת ר' משה
May we all merit to see ישועות and בשורות טובות

Dear Readers

As the global Shabbos Project is happening next week (Parshas Vayeira), encouraging people around the world to keep Shabbos, I'd like to share with your readers that I attended last year's annual Shabbos Project Challah Bake in Stamford Hill.

I was so moved and inspired by the beautiful atmosphere: the singing and dancing, and in particular the Achdus of so many different types of people coming together to create and knead Challah dough, and then Daven together and do the Mitzvah of Hafrashas Challah.

Readers should be aware that these types of events are wonderful opportunities to be mekarev others, and consider who they could invite/bring along to this year's Challah Bake.

A small act of outreach can change lives!

Sincerely,

Mrs S.K.

Dear Catering Managers

I would like to bring an important detail to your attention regarding standard table service etiquette, which I hope will be useful for your team's ongoing training.

It is traditional, respectful, and standard professional practice that table service always begins with the elders, specifically grandmothers and elderly guest.

Regrettably, it is becoming increasingly common at functions to see elderly guest left until last, while teenagers and children are served first. Ensuring that wait staff are explicitly instructed to prioritise the older generation is a simple but powerful way to show respect and maintain high hospitality standards.

Please consider sharing this reminder with your front-of-house teams to help ensure a consistently respectful experience for all families you serve.

Many thanks.
